

Carpenter Technology Announces Completion of Repairs on Press at Reading, PA Facility

March 3, 2022

PHILADELPHIA, March 03, 2022 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Carpenter Technology Corporation (NYSE: CRS) (the "Company") today announced its 4500 ton press at its Reading, PA facility is back in service. The Company previously announced the unplanned outage of this press in December 2021.

"The Reading press is a piece of highly specialized equipment that is critical to producing materials for Aerospace and select other end-market applications. Our teams, through careful planning and focused execution, completed the necessary repairs within our target timeline," said Tony R. Thene, President and CEO. "In addition, while making the necessary repairs, we pulled forward some of the normal recurring maintenance activities that would have been necessary later this year.

"With the repairs behind us, we can focus on satisfying customer demand in the Aerospace supply chain, where a broad-based recovery continues to take shape. Over the coming quarters and years, Carpenter Technology is uniquely positioned to capitalize on growth across our diversified solutions portfolio in attractive end use markets combined with leading operational capacity and capabilities."
